MAKING GOVERNMENT AND NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS WORK better for citizens is a formidable challenge for public leaders in the U.S. and abroad. Mark

Moore, Hauser Professor of Nonprofit Organizations and faculty director of the Hauser Center for Nonprofit Organizations, has focused much of his research on these issues. He is author of "Creating Public Value: Strategic Management in Government." Creating public value | Harvard Kennedy School We argued that just as the goal of private managers was to create private (economic) value, the goal of government agencies was to "create public (social) value." To determine what constituted public value, and to act to produce it, we developed a concept of "strategy in the public sector." On Creating Public Value - Innovations In this context, it's easy to lose sight of the important collective interests and public values that government is entrusted to protect, advance, and secure. It's even easier to miss the crucial contribution that public leaders and managers make toward achieving these important social purposes. Creating Public Value will highlight the importance of this work and help public leaders and managers improve their performance in guiding their societies to define and create public value. Creating Public Value | Harvard Kennedy School Public value creation is situated in relationships between the individual and society, founded in individuals, constituted by subjective evaluations against basic needs, activated by and realized in emotional-motivational states, and produced and reproduced in experience-intense practices.
