regular class time on Zoom and guide students through remote learning activities. Flip the classroom. With the "flipped" classroom model, teachers assign students new material to learn on their own (videos, reading assignments, etc.), then use class time to help clarify the new information and put it to use. Teachers' Essential Guide to Zoom | Common Sense Education All kids learn better when they engage with material in multiple ways: Lessons that involve writing, speaking, drawing, and listening, for example, give students four opportunities to deepen their understanding of the work. For ELLs, those additional engagements also provide a little breathing room so they can work through the language barrier. 6 Essential Strategies for Teaching ELLs | Edutopia To make learning with digital content more dynamic for students, consider mixing up the types of resources you share with them in Google Classroom. In addition to G Suite tools like Google Docs and Google Slides, teachers and students can share other types of media, including images, links to websites, YouTube videos, and screencasts.
